Welcome

Dear artists, dear guests,

we would like to welcome you to HELLERAU and to Dresden. We hope that you will feel at home during your stay here. We will do our best to ensure that you will have a pleasant and inspiring time with us.

One of our goals is to make HELLERAU a place to meet and interact. We want to create a place for exchanging ideas, creative freedom and inspiration. We are therefore very pleased that you would like to contribute to this and that we can present your work.

This handbook will give you answers to some important questions that will provide you with orientation during your stay in Dresden. If you have any further questions, please contact us. We will gladly help you.

We are looking forward to meeting you at rehearsals, after the performances, in the garden or in the Festspielhaus and to being active together with you in HELLERAU.

Best regards

Carena Schlewitt and the HELLERAU team

History

The HELLERAU myth is based on the vision of the craftsman and entrepreneur Karl Schmidt, who founded the Deutsche Werkstätten Hellerau and also created the first German garden city, the Hellerau housing estate, in 1909.

In 1911 the Festspielhaus Hellerau was built according to a design by the architect Heinrich Tessenow. Tessenow thus translated the visions of the stage designer Adolphe Appia and the music teacher Émile Jaques-Dalcroze into a spatial structure whose clarity and functional structure set the trend for modernity. The teachings of Émile Jaques-Dalcroze were also an alternative to the previous dance and theatre tradition. At the centre of these teachings is the „moving human being“, who is educated to become a complete individual through the targeted training of his rhythmic abilities. Among the students of Jaques-Dalcroze was the young Mary Wigman, who made expressive dance internationally known as a dancer, choreographer and dance teacher.

Until 1914 the Festspielhaus Hellerau attracted artists from all over Europe to Hellerau, including Rilke, Kafka, Diaghilev, Van de Velde, Kokoschka, Gropius, Van der Rohe, Werfel, Busoni, Milhaud, Le Corbusier, Nolde and Stefan Zweig.

Today, HELLERAU is one of the most important international centers of contemporary art in Germany and Europe. HELLERAU acts as an interdisciplinary co-production and guest performance house and offers contemporary arts dance, music, theatre, performance, media art and visual arts spaces for production and presentation. Since the 2018/2019 season, Carena Schlewitt has been the artistic director and, together with the HELLERAU team, implements the program with around 250 events per season. HELLERAU is a stage of the state capital Dresden and member of the alliance of international production companies.

Dresden-Altstadt

Dresden Altstadt is the historical part of Dresden with numerous museums, galleries and sights. To look around here, the tram stop of the tram line 8 Albertplatz is a good place to start.

From there it is best to walk along the Hauptstraße towards the Goldener Reiter. From there you can stroll across the Augustus-Bridge and then start your exploration tour for all the sights.
